Shipping the product is NOT the issue any more. I need to know what about the future. Based on your information provided on a regular basis, it appears that everything you say - is a lie. In talking to other Rollabind Customers (who have delisted, or put on hold, your products .. and there are a number of them) the word is that you are in financial difficulty and the reason that material is not being shipped is that you are not paying your suppliers. In communication with you, none of your information in the last two months, appears to be true. Each time you state it will ship and each time you have still another excuse. Who am I to believe, an existing Rollabind Customer who delisted your product for the exact reason what I am going through OR you.

The information I am collecting appears to be closer to the truth than what you are giving me. To receive the goods at this junction is of no value to me if I cannot count on a steady stream of supply in the future. I CANNOT stock a product where the supplier does not deliver, when he has already been paid. My local counsel's advised me that this borderlines on fraud and should be dealt with in the appropriate manner. Even if this is resolved, future relationship would be strained, it may be better to sue for my monies (plus damages) and back away from what appears to be the worst mistake this company has made.

Somebody being sick - or you having health problems should NOT stop the flow of products. It would appear that you are a one(1) man show - while I thought I was dealing with a reputable company. Moving a warehouse should not stop the flow of product, unless the warehouse is located within a supplier (or fulfillment services) that is holding shipping, pending payments.

I have instructed counsel to proceed in finding a Legal company in your area and start the basic groundwork as I really do not believe this will resolve itself as each time we communicate it is delayed another week. If we can resolve it - and I have some assurance of future supply, then we can stop it at any time - as they are NOT to serve without my approval and lawyers usually move slower, than I would like.

However I am skeptical that you can ensure me of anything, based on your history of promises that were never kept. I really do not know, how you can prove to me (at this stage) that you are a worthy supplier to www.Printer.CA. If this issue is somehow resolved, future orders will NOT be prepaid. If that is not to your liking, then please advise as it is of no use moving forward with our relationship.

I remain,

S.J. (Hans) de Wit
